

Light Brown Leghorns - Female

These chickens are known for their dependable production of white eggs. They are active birds and the hens rarely want to sit on their eggs. They are great foragers, making them a great choice for an organic free-range chicken farm.

The single combed Light Brown Leghorns are a showy alternative to the White Leghorns kept on commercial flocks. The roosters' heads are orange-red, shading to golden yellow toward the shoulders, and then deep, orange-red over their backs. Their tails, wings fronts and breasts are black. Hens are browner with an orangish head and neck.

Average mature weight: Roosters 5 1/2 lbs., Hens 4 1/2 lbs.

Average of 4-6 white eggs per week
